HEATED UP Fitness

FREE GUIDE

THE HEALTHY SNACK GUIDE

15 easy ideas, a simple rule, and a prep plan —
so snacking works for your goals instead of against them.

From Mikia Gumms · ISSA Certified Personal Trainer · Westbank New Orleans

START HERE

Snack with a plan.

Snacking isn't the problem. Snacking with no plan is. When you're hungry and nothing is ready, you grab whatever is closest — and that is usually the thing that leaves you hungry again in an hour.

THE RULE

Protein + Produce (or fiber)

Pair something with protein in it with a fruit, vegetable, or whole grain. The protein keeps you full, the fiber slows things down, and together they keep your energy steady between meals.

Size it with your hand

PROTEIN

One palm

Greek yogurt, eggs, jerky, cottage cheese, a protein shake, edamame.

PRODUCE

One fist

Berries, apple, carrots, cucumber, peppers, grapes, banana.

FATS & CRUNCH

One thumb

Nuts, nut butter, seeds, avocado, dark chocolate.

Three habits that make it stick

1. Portion it before you're hungry.
   Put snacks in a container or bag instead of eating from the package.
2. Keep one ready snack where you need it.
   Car, gym bag, desk, fridge shelf at eye level.
3. Drink water first.
   Thirst and hunger feel alike. Have a glass, then decide.

GRAB & GO

Grab-and-go

No prep, no fridge, no excuses. These live in a bag, a car, or a desk drawer.

Apple + a thumb of almond butter

Crunch and sweetness with protein and fats to hold you over.

String cheese + a handful of grapes

Protein plus produce in two minutes, nothing to wash or cut.

Beef or turkey jerky + a banana

Shelf-stable protein; check labels for added sugar and sodium.

Trail mix, portioned (nuts, seeds, a little dried fruit)

Easy to overdo, so bag it ahead — one handful is a serving.

Single-serve tuna or chicken pouch + whole-grain crackers

A real mini-meal for long days or when lunch runs late.

TRY THIS

Pick two from this page and keep them stocked for a week. Planning two snacks beats trying to plan twenty.

SWEET CRAVINGS

Sweet, but smart

You don't have to skip dessert-style snacks. Build them so they still do something for you.

Greek yogurt parfait

Layer plain Greek yogurt, berries, and a sprinkle of granola or oats.

Overnight oats jar

Oats, milk, chia, fruit. Make a few at once and grab one.

Açaí or fruit bowl with nuts or seeds on top

Add the protein and fats so it keeps you full, not just sweet.

Cottage cheese + pineapple or peaches

High in protein, creamy, and ready in seconds.

Dark chocolate square + strawberries

Satisfies a real craving with a small, planned portion.

SAVORY & POST-WORKOUT

Crunchy & recovery

For the salty crowd, and for the 30 minutes after you train when your body wants fuel.

Hummus + carrots, cucumber, and peppers

Crunchy, filling, and easy to portion into small containers.

Roasted chickpeas

Bake or air-fry with your favorite seasoning for a chip-style crunch.

Hard-boiled eggs with salt, pepper, and hot sauce

Batch cook a dozen on Sunday; they last the week.

Protein shake + a banana

A simple post-workout combo: protein to repair, carbs to refuel.

Turkey and avocado roll-ups

Wrap turkey slices around avocado and cucumber; skip the bread.

TRY THIS

Training today? Aim to eat within an hour or two afterward, and include some protein.

SUNDAY RESET

A 30-minute prep plan

You don't need to meal-prep everything. Do these five things once a week and you'll always have a good option within arm's reach.

1. Hard-boil a dozen eggs.
2. Wash and cut fruit and veggies, and store them in clear containers you can see.
3. Portion nuts, trail mix, and crackers into small bags or containers.
4. Make 3–4 overnight oats or yogurt parfait jars.
5. Restock your bag, car, and desk with one shelf-stable snack each.

This guide is general education, not medical advice. If you have a medical condition, food allergies, or are pregnant or nursing, check with your doctor or a registered dietitian before changing how you eat.

READY FOR MORE?

Want a plan built for you?

Meal plans, workout programs, and 1:1 coaching — online or in person on the Westbank. Book a free consult and let's talk about your goals.

Book a Free Consult

heatedupfitness.com
mikiagbusiness@gmail.com · (504) 345-8709